

1995 A: Division: Academic Date: November

Course: B: Department: Arts & Humanities
Division of Course Information Form: X
dated: September 1993

E: 3
Semester Credit

C: POLI 201
Subject & Course No.

D: POLITICAL THEORY
Descriptive Title

F: Calendar Description:
(Enter date & section)

Summary of Revisions:

Purchased by Students

N: Textbooks and Materials to be

Q. METHOD OF INSTRUCTION

Presentation of the course will involve the use of formal lecturing, group work by students, and in-class discussion of assigned readings. Additional readings may be assigned for each unit of the course, and are available on reserve with the library.

B. COURSE EVALUATION

A student's performance will be based on a combination of the following: a formal research paper, and participation. All elements must be completed by the student. Evaluation of a student's performance will be based on a combination of a written examination, and participation.

Midterm	30%	Research Essay
Final Exam	30%	Final Exam
Participation	20%	Participation
Total	100%

Note: Participation grades for students may be based on a combination of the following:

In-class tests	10%	Short Answer
Attendance/participation	10%	Attendance
Research papers	10%	Short Answer
Classroom review	10%	Book Review
Class presentation	10%	In-class
Class debate	10%	Formal
Examination	10%	Oral
Additional assignments	10%	Additional